sular report on the trade of Korea for last year, when the country was the scene rebellion and war. The reports hitherto published by the Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs of the trade at the Korean ports bave now, of course ceased to appear, and the greater value therefore attaches to the excellently written report of Mr. W. HILLIER, the Consul. Instead of being prejudically affected by the rebellion and war. the trade of Korea in 1894 exceeded that of any previous year since the country was opened to foreign commerce. Mr. HILLIER thinks the effects of military occupation may possibly show themselves later, and that spring. the commerce of the present year may feel the reaction of last year's experiences, " dur-"ing which so much has happened that "neight to paralyse trade." "But," the Consul adds, "this is a country of sur-"prises, and it contains so many latent "resources which require only encourage-"ment and fair play to develop them, that "sanguine predictions 'as to the future are "alway justifiable." It appears, too, that the Japanese occupation has introduced a large amount of money into the country. which is calculated to stimulate trade, and with the establishment of law and order the probability seems rather in favour of a continued improvement in trade than a falling

In this increase of trade, however, Eng. land, it is to be feared, will possess but a small share. The most noticeable feature in the import trade last year was the large increase of goods of Japanese manufacture. The Manchester goods, Mr. HILLIER says, are undeniably better than the Japanese copies, but the difference in price is so great said I hoped we would not ment for the regular this way.
